80 wisely .- Newport Letter to the New York

Tribune.

MEMPHIS.—The King of Terrors continues to snatch victims with fearful rapidity. One by one those who remain in the city and are liable to the monster malady are taken down, and the question is asked by those yet on their feet, "Who will be the next to fall?" But three short weeks ago our city was active with business of all classes, our people were happy and prosperous, and the entire business community was in cheerful temper over the prospect of a heavy and lucrative fall trade. Now our streets are deserted, our stores and residences empty, and out of a population of more than 50,000 barely 5,000 remain, and of these nearly 500 are in the grave, and perhaps double that number lie suffering with racking pains and burning fevers. But three weeks have passed since the fever broke out among us, and from six to eight weeks must yet elapso before relief can be extended and the fever checked by the appearance of fcost. The scenes about the aid centres remind one of the days of war. Particularly does the waiting crowd of basket holding people about the Commissary Department awaken in the writer's memory the days following the capture of the city of Savannah, when the pepole of a starved town, many the members of families of the first social position, went daily to take their place in a long line and draw the rations which the generous people of the cities of the North had sent in great ship loads to the suffering Southern port. Here the crowd is made up of negroes, who sit on the carbing, sit on the pavement of the street beyond the railing of the Commissary Depot, and clutching their baskets and the orders from ward committoes, watch intently the large door and listen long in vain to hear their own names pronounced by the black orier, mounted on the box upon the window's ledge. The crowd is four or five hundred in number during the livelong day. The system of giving rations, as worked by the Relief Committee, is as cautious, as proof against imposition, probably, as it is possible to make it. All applications of the needy are made to ward committeemen, whose duty it is to look into the justice of the claims made to them, and then to give a draft on Commissary Maccabe for the number of rations and the number of days. This draft is presented, and the holder's name and time for drawing and number of rations are entered in a large indexed book. From this book they are fed in turn as long as their drafts call for. Over thirty thousand rations have been issued so far, and the demand is increasing daily in proportion to the rapidly growing want and utter destitution among the colored people. The books of the Commissary are admirably kept, showing every ounce of food received through any source, and showing clearly its disposition. - Analanche

CHEATERS AT CARDS. - One of the heads of the French police de surete told me the other day that he had a list of 8,000 cheaters at cards, who live by nothing else. Some of them carry on their trade singly, but most of them in combigation. These combinations generally consist of two professors of sleight of hand and of several retrievers, who are called in French slang mangeurs. The mangeurs never play themselves, but they pick up pigeons, become intimate with them, and then introduce to them the professors, who pluck them. The editor of one of the principal New York newspapers was recently cheated out of a large sum of money by wo men, who are at present in England. - London Truth.
